

Patrick enrolled in the program as a high school junior who needed to improve his basic skills and was without any previous work experience. He participated in the Summer of Service with the Inland Northwest Blood Center and received an AmeriCorps education award. Throughout his work experience, he impressed his supervisors with his dedication and work ethic. Patrick also learned about volunteer recruitment and coordination.

Now a senior at North Central high school, Patrick is currently working on his culminating project and created the website spokaneswhatshot.com. He went beyond the actual requirements of his project and sought a business license to promote his website as an actual company. Patrick is currently using the skills he learned during his work experience to promote local musicians.
